2 Key Posts

VIENTIANE, Laos, March 17 (UPD. - Most Americans at the refugee and logistical support hase of Sam Thong were evacuated tonight in the face of advancing North Vietnamese troops who seized two key posts six and eight miles away.

The U.S.-administered hospital at Sam Thong was evacuated dur-ing the day and civilian refugees in the area began streaming to the south and west ahead of a Communist attack force estimated at 2,000. Most U.S. personnal were flown out.

The United States has acknow-ledged that at least 20 Americans are at Sam Thong, Four who were left included Edgar (Pop) Buell, 56, a former Indiana farmer who gained fame here as the individu-alistic administrator of American aid to refugees in north Laos for the last nine years.

Laotian officials announced the fall of the government oniposts and an airstrip to an estimated 2,000 guerrilla troops who attacked last night and drove out the defenders this morning.

The two outposts both on mountains 6,300 feet high, had been set up to guard approaches to Sam Thong and Long Cheng, the two U.S. support bases vital to the defense of northern Laos. Both bases are now within easy artillery range of North Vietnamese forces. At least 56 government troops were wounded during the overnight attacks against the outposts at The Tam Bleung, six miles north-east of Sam Thong, and at Phou Pha Xei; eight miles east.

East Germans Bar 20 Press Groups From Talks

BONN, March 17 (Reuters). East Germany has barred representatives of at least 20 newspapers, news agencies, radio stations and other news media from attending Thursday's East-West German summit in Erfurt.

These include Journalists from Time and Life magazines, the National Broadcasting Co., the Chicago Tribune and Los Angeles Times.

Also affected are the British Broadcasting Corp., several British and London newspapers including the Observer, the Guardian and the Dally Telegraph.

The ban also applies to all Greek and several Swiss newspapers, two Dutch papers, the Japanese news agency Kyodo and Yomiuri Shimbun of Tokyo.

A spokesman for the Foreign Press Association in Bonn said the whole situation was completely confused with no indication what criteria the East Germans were applying.

He also told a West German agreements with the newspaper interviewer the least he powers:

Freedom Song Smuggled Out By Theodorakis

LONDON, March 17 (AP). Composer Mikis Theodorakis has smuggled out a freedom song from his detention camp in Greece, friends reported yesterday.

The song was written on a postcard to Richard Stokes, a professor of composition at the Royal Academy of Music, who said he is working on an arrangement and hopes to record it soon. "It's a beautiful song. very moving, very melodic," he said. He quoted this verse, translated by a Greek contact: Remember us, my poor aban-

NEW YORK, March 17 (NYT),—The Army and Air Porce Motion Picture Service has - banned "M*A*S*H*" from service installations because it 'reflects unfavorably' on the military, the Army Times reported yesterday.

The newspaper said 20 to 25 officers from personnel, information, medical and chaplain branches of the two armed services had viewed the film and turned it down. No enlisted men were included in the screening, it said.

"M.A.S.H." is about Army combat surgeons in the Korean War, whose antics make it nossible for them to endure the horrors and conditions with which they must deal. One source said the censors felt the film would undermine the confidence of the average soldier in any medical treatment he would receive in combat.

Meeting at Erfurt

West German leaders have been warning their people not to be too sanguine about the prospects for the meeting at Erfurt between their chancellor, Willy Brandt, and his East German opposite number, Premier Willi Stoph. Their point is well taken.

For nearly all Germans, even the semhlance of an approach to healing the division in that nation would be welcome; most of them long for some alleviation of the results of that division-split families, fissioning of old institutions, the eense that familiar scenes now lie in politically alien territory, the diversion of national assets, cultural and economic-all the loss and bitterness, in sum, of 21 years of separation. And the simple fact of this all-German summit inevitably suggests positive results.

But these will certainly not come easily, or immediately, if at all. The possibility remains that Mr. Stoph will not proceed beyond the first item that is clearly on his personal agenda-a recognition by Bonn of the legal sovereignty of East Germany. In that case, the Erfurt meeting is hardly likely to get very far.

East Germany is an economic fact, undoubtedly. It has an indigenous industrial strength that ranks it high among the world's producere. But whether it can be called, with equal justice, a political fact is guite another matter. There is stability in East Germany, a greater stability, to all appearances, than its eastern neighbors possess. It is under less publicized repression and closer to Moscow. But that the East German leaders are still so insistent on recognition of their state, so reluctant to facilitate communications with the West, so much more Muscovite than the Kremlin, are not signs of strength and confidence. They are manifestations of the psychology and the concrete fear that built the Berlin

In other words, the East German Communists are still so fearful of the East German people, and of the pull of the West upon them, that they, in effect, are asking Bonn to help them to assert nationhood as a precondition for any easing of the situation along their borders. And this signaling and assisting in the permanent division of the country, is neither politically nor morally possible for the Federal Republic.

The dialogue may help. There are practical problems that might be solved, for the mutual benefit of both Germanys, even within the rigid framework of East German preconceptions. It is that which can be hoped for from the Erfurt meeting-but only hoped for, not expected with any degree of confidence. Whatever its temperature elsewhere, the cold war is still gelid in the hearts of Walter Ulbricht and his coterie.

The Ghost Army

The letter from Premier Kosygin to Preaident Nixon was probably intended to influence events in Cambodia quite as much as those in Laos, with which it was ostensibly concerned. Its main thrust was to place the blame for all the problems of the two countries upon the United States, and to disclaim any international responsibility for the situation there.

This, in itself, is not an absolutely untenable diplomatic position. There are many Americans, and more Europeans, who would accept it. But there is a great hollow within the Soviet note, a great gap in its reasoning. For Mr. Kosygin's purposes, the North Vietnamese forces in Laos and Cambodia are nonexistent: their presence is not denied-it is just ignored.

This is, of course, in line with the North Vietnamese position at the Paris talks, a position in which occasional cracks have become visible, but which essentially holds that there are no North Vietnamese troops anywhere outside the borders of that nation.

It would follow, then, that the United States has been battling only South Vietnamese Viet Cong in South Vietnam; only Laotian Pathet Lao on the Ho Chi Minh Trail (which must necessarily be a myth). And the mobs in Cambodia? Obviously, they have been rioting against an army of diplomacy is impossibly hampered, and public gullibility assumed on a scale that passes comprehension. The "credibility gap" that aroused so much wrath in the United States, and which still baunts Congress and the press, is minuscule by comparison with the way in which the truth is flouted in Hanoi and Moscow-not by simple suggestions of the false and petty evasions of the truth, but by a whopping, if implicit and trans-

So long as this policy of treating the North Vietnamese forces as sheer illusion persists,

One of the classic phenomena of the cold war has been the combination of native Communist activists with "volunteers" from outside—a reminiscence of the Spanish Civil War, where there were actual volunteers at the front. The Red Chinese intervention in Korea took the same form, allegedly, at the beginning, and Moscow threatened to send "volunteers" into the Middle East during the Suez crisis.

The world is rather more sophisticated now; it does not even react with great indignation to such transparent frauds, except when Americans try to play the same game on a far smaller scale in, say, Laos. But it is not likely that there can be much progress sphere, bringing uear-war with at any negotiating table—whether in Paris, Vientiane or Phnom Penh, eo long as substantial, well-armed or highly organized were rare and temporary-like troops, under orders from Hanoi, continue Theodere Roosevelt's peacemaking to be talked of as if they were pure fictions efforts between Russia and Japan, after the United States itself had or worse, if they are not talked about by acquired Asian interests by seizing those who give them their orders or their the Philippines. supplies.

International Opinion

Finnish Election

The formation of a new Finnish government, which may be entrusted to Foreign Minister Ahti Karjalainen, may require long and delicate consultations. Mr. Karjalainen eaid his Center party was not ready to cooperate with the Finnish Liberals and Conservatives, to form an exclusively "bourgeois" government,

This statement indicates that President Kekkonen also doee not wish for the formation of a wide coalition going from the Social Democrats to the Conservatives and excluding the Communiets and the "poujadistes." This ie no doubt wby Mr. Karjalainen eaid that the present "Red-Green" coalition grouping the Communiste, Social Democrats and the Center would continue to rule after eeveral minor changes. The "Popular Front à la Finlandaise" may have a comfortable parliamentary majority. But if the Conservative party opposition blocks such a formula, then it will be necessary to appoint a government of civil servants pending a rapid return to the polls.

Cyprus—back in the old routine—goes rapidly from bad to worse. Will there be more murders, more bombs, more chaosremembering always that one stray bullet wounding one stray Turkish Cypriot could move this latest pitting of Greek against Greek back into the massistrom of communal strife?

Sihanouk's Fears

A year ago Prince Sihanouk concluded that hie neutralism and independence were not eufficiently respected in Hanoi or by the Viet Cong. In the long run he may feat Vietnamese designs on Cambodia as a vassal will become as manifest as they have been all along in the parallel case of Laos. Hence the shift in Cambodia'e sympathies to the point of resuming relations with the Americans last July. But neither this move, nor Prince Sihanouk's concern lest the American withdrawal from Southeast Asia should be too epeedy, mean that he has rejected tigial isolationism and put its back his old premises. He has simply realized that the situation is more complex and his task of precerving his independence more intricate than he had thought.

TONDON.—It is fortunate that President Nixon is a shrewd politician and therefore unlikely ever to face such a showdown with the Senate as that unsuccessfully confronted by Woodrow Wilson just half a century ago.

On March 19, 1920, a band of angry legislators revolted against Wilson'e visionary plans, rejected the Versailles Treaty and association with the League of Nations, and pointed the United States once more along ao iso:ationist road. Isolationism from an outside

Hoped for a Phoenix

The big initial dent into the isolationist legacy of George Washington was made when America loined the Allies fighting Germany in World War I and for the first time sacrificed much blood and conflict somewhat inadvertently, hoped to encourage from that conflict's ashes the phoenix of collective security represented by tha League.

His dream, bowever, was tarnished by European Jealousies, undermined by secret treaties, weakened by the president's own failing health and judgment, and finally acotched by a determined band of senators.

U.S. and South Africa

The commendable closure of the American Consulate in Rhodesia leads one to hope for the logical closure of the American Embassy and Consulates in South Africa because in South Africa, too, a minority (16 percent) controls the country's 12,750,000 Africans, 1,859,000 coloreds and 561,000 Asians. It would be the perpetration of an error for the U.S. government to neglect (benignly?) the status of 15 million non-whites in South Africa now that the consulategeneral in Salisbury has been closed (hopefully) on behalf of 4.8 million Africans in Rhodesia. With reference to your recently published article wherein Andrea Papandriou holds the CIA re-sponsible for the existence of a military regime in Greece (an allegation of many other supposed boyscout resistants), he should surely know that all the CIAs of the world would have been unable to induce the Greek nation to apathetically accept an imposed government had not Papandreou, his family and his political cronies of all shades, the Palace, the press, the establishment, by their doings prior to the takeover, created a situation and a state of mind whereby the devil himself would

The Great Genocide Panic

Nixon and Nigeria

By Arnold Beichman

The consequences of capitulation or surrender would be defeat and slavery. It would mean the surrender of our sovereignty and survival as a people. It would mean perpetual exploitation and expropriation of wealth by the conquerors, and it would mean our ever remaining secondclass citizens, paying war reparations to the enemy as long as they wish.

-Odumegwu Ojukwu, defeated leader of the Bizira rebellion.

DORT HARCOURT, Nigeria.--A young Nigerian mechanical engineer from Lagos working here to refurbish the electric power system asked me who I was. I told. him. He stared hard at me fora few moments and asked:

"Well, have you found the genocide and starvation you're looking

I said nothing. He then began: Why did your press say things about us that weren't true? I took my engineering degrees in British technical schools and universities but I shall never forgive or forget what the British press and yours said about us, people like Winston Churchill and the son of that (He meant Auberon Waugh)

The young engineer's feelings can be multiplied a hundredfold to get some idea of how Gen. Gowon and federal military government feel about President Nixon and his White House advisers.

As one looks back at the Nigerian civil war, which ended after two and a half years in mid-January, it is to wonder how men like Sem Kennedy and Goodell accepted and repeated the still unproven charges of genocide against the federal government. It is easy to understand why Ojukwu raised the cry of genocide and enslavement, but why normally rational men were ready to equate a cruel war with Hitlerian extermination is hard to

'The Broken China'

It is even more difficult to understand why President Nixon himself got so involved in the Nigerian civil war that even after it bad ended, he so ignored the mood of the Gowon government that not even Secretary of State Rogers's visit last month was able to repair the damage. Or, as one on-the-spot observer in Lagos put

"Rogers picked up some of the broken china off the floor but he couldn't really put it together again."

It has been forgotten in America, but not by the Nigerian goverument, that on Sept. 10, during the 1968 presidential campaign, candidate Nixon said:

"Until now, efforts to relieve the Biafran people have been thwarted by the desire of the central government of Nigeria to pursue total and unconditional victory and by fear of the Ibo people that surrender means wholesale atrocities and genocide. But genocide is what is taking place right now-and starvation is the grim reaper. This is not the time to stand on ceremony or to 'go through channels' or to observe d'plomatic niceties."

advice he gave as candidate. Nixon about what ought to be done about post-civil war Nigeria. His actions, however, have injured American relationships with Nigeria, militarily the most powerful and politically the most influential country today in sub-Saharan However optimistic are U.S. Embassy reports about the present state of U.S.-Nigerian relations, I can assure Mr. Nixon that it will be some time before Gen. Gowon and those around him forget that the moment of Nigeria's triumph, the White House tried to bull its way into what was Biafra with its own made-in-America relief program.

Diplomatic Advice

American policy toward Nigeria, was formulated by the White House in total disregard of veteran diplomats in Lagos. The advice simply that the United States should demonstrate some sensitivity toward the Gowon government, which had long been smarting over the effective pro-Biaira public relations program in America and Instead, the White House rushed an emissary to Lagos in January, Col. Eugene Dewey, who was de-suribed as the President's special envoy for Nigerian relief. He was ordered to obtain an audience with Gen. Gowon and to tell him what Mr. Nixon planned to do about relief for the people in the Eastern. states.

The British High Commissioner Sir Leslie Glass, a genial, paunchy diplomat with a weakness for direct speech, was approached for his advice. He heard out the White House proposals in silence. He was then asked by Col. Dewey what he thought of them. Sir Leslie is reputed to have said: "If I were Gowon, I'd tell you to and Were the Herald Tribune an underground newspaper in New York's East Village, Sir Lealie's pithy comment could be reprinted. His useful advice was not followed. Instead, a high embassy official saw Gowon's chef de cabinet and told him that Col. Dewey wanted to see Gowon.

The Nigerian official replied with a polite euphemism, according to Lagos sources, that any proposals to the general would be "counterproductive." Thereafter, word filtered out that Gowon would, until further notice, see no foreign diplomate nor allow them to visit what had been Biaira.

Envoy Expelled

The ultimate bumiliation came early on the morning of Feb. 1 when Col. Dewsy was expelled by police, who escorted him from his hotel to Ikeia Airport and saw to it that he boarded a Europe-bound

This report, based on high Nigerian sources, excludes the humunitarian aspect of the postwar aftermath which undoubtedly was one of the nonpolitical motives which moved President Nixon and his staff. It is intended merely to narrate a sequence of events which demonstrated a unique insensitivity to the feelings of a government which had just won a war and toward which the United States had been adamantly neutral. As one diplomat put it

"Do you for one moment think that President Nixon would have sent to Prague relief planes and emissaries to tell the Russian occupiers of Czechoslovakia what he intended to do for humanitarian reasons?

As for the genocide accusation, had that been Nigeria's policy, it is difficult to see why at the moment when the Ibos were helpless, the alleged genocide didn't contime. Soldier rapists and starving children are horrifying enough but they do not necessarily add up to genocide.

In actual fact, nobody, eventhose who listened to the atrocitygenocide. What can easily be proven is that there were heavy casualties on both sides, malnutrition, lack of medical attention and the accepted barbarities of war. particularly of a civil war. But to draw op an indictment against a whole people, something which Edmund Burke said he could not do but which President Nixon did with his accusation against Nigeria of "genocide," is surprising in a President whose image is that of a statesman who never loses his

O'Casey at The Opera

By David Stevens

BORDEAUX, France.—An American opera based on an Irish play given in a French translation and production. This thumbnail description gives a suggestion of the cultural diversity that went into the European premiere of Elie Slegmeister's "The Plough and the Stars."

The three performances in this city's 190-year-old Grand Théatre last weekend were the outcome of a fair amount of courage, ambition and generosity by all concerned. Sean O'Casey encouraged the composer and his librettist, Edward Mabley, in their extensive adaptation of his play, and the playwright's widow was present for the Bor-deaux production. For lus part, Stegmeister was dealing with a play already so musical in its language and so explicitly Irish in mood as to pose some daunting problems.

Finally, Roger Lalande, a veteran stage director in his final year as administrator of the Bordeaux house, took the initiative that brought Slegmeister's work to Europe and, in fact, gave it the first production i:1 a professional theater—the previous staging having lest year at Louisiana State University.

But a composer who takes on such a task has to assert his nwn artistic personality, and Siegmeister has deliberately avoided any temptation to evoke a Hibernian musical atmosphere, even to the point of not using any of the familiar songs or hymns called for in the play. Instead, he has concentrated human conflicts evoked in the atmosphere of the 1916 Easter Rebellion. And he has responded to these universal situations with a score that is faithful to his own distinctly American musical personality. Drawing on a long background in American musical theater-Broadway and operatic, folk music, popular songs, hand music and various subdivisions of jazz—he has written a score rich in contrast and of considerable, if not consistent, dramatic strength.

There are plenty of opportunities for voices, ranging from a romantic cantilena of shifting tonality for the arias and duets of Nora and Jack, to a more rhythmically defined musicalcomedy style for the tipsy carpenter Fluther Good, and a sardonic, parodistic line for Bessie Burgess, the drunken, Anglophile harridan with a heart of gold.

pale in their characterization and less well defined musically, but Carla Rutili revealed an attractive lyric soprano as Nora and effectively sustained a long, mad scene that intermittently continues throughout the last act, while the baritone Jean Angot, who stepped into the part on short notice, was dependable as Jack.

Straightforward, Clear

Lalande's production was straightforward and clear, as was the French translation of Jean Revol and David Noakes, numbers in the Broadway manner, one growing out of a parroom scene and the other from the zany outhurst of looting during the rebellion, missed fire. This seemed to come both from the work's farring shift in mood and a lack of precision in dance sequences—an outgrowth of the limited rehearsal time endemic in French opera houses.

Plerre Castex's single set, following the libretto's compression of the action, effectively combined street, bar and tenement apartment scenes, but more sensitive lighting would have made better use of it. A sign of the work's strong personality was the sharp division on opening night between vociferous approval by the younger part of the audience in the galleries and signs of opposition from other parts of the house. But a much improved second performance was

Dutch Artist Lives in a Timeless, Twilight World

By Jules B. Farber

DEN ILP. The Netherlands-Anton Hayboer, 45, is a Dutch graphic artist whose etchings and collages have been purchased by the U.S. Library of Congress, the New York Museum of Modern Art and the Pittsburgh Museum. His work is in some of the top private collections in Europe.

At the Municipal Museum in The Hague, a special room is devoted to his graphics. And, for the past 12 years, Heyboer has been "on salary" to the Espace Gallery in Amsterdam, with complete freedom to work when something in his life has to which, two years ago, toured the municipal museums of The Hague, Eindhoven and Amsterdam. He has retreated from the world and lives in self-chosen isolation from civilization. Using a private pictorial language, Heyhoer bases his work on hate—not his own but that which he has seen and felt in environment, where he is free to exist in his own way. Windows Barred

He lives with two 29-year-old girls. Maria and Lotti, in a cow hern, kept in perpetual twilight. The windows and doors are covered over and barred. Kennels for six Great Danes and two German shepherds are in the heart of the house, which is furnished with fossils, stones, driftwood, wooden crates and tree stumps. There are no beds. only log slabs covered with straw.

There is one gas burner for cooking. Two would distract. Electricity is rarely turned on. There is a telephone "hut no one would ever call us. Even the gallery is afraid because I told them never to do it," Heyboer said. 'We use it only to get the doctor for the dogs when they attack each other or are

On that rare occasion when the artist is willing to talk to someone from the outside world, one gets the feeling that he is not really there. He never sits but crouches like an animal on his haunches.

An etching press stands in the far corner of the barn, Heyboer hovers over it, writing, scratching on the forms, cutting fragments for assembly of his thoughts as collages.

"When you live the whole day in the dark." Heyboer said, "the concentration is higher and when I make one thing in that darkness, it becomes the light. I can't live without darkness. The spirit can't have the direct influence of the sun. I even made myself allergic to the sun after seven years of this life.

"The life I'm leading is going more toward animals than people. You never see animals lyout at night."

The Dog Collar

Animals have always played an important role in the life of the artist. He has felt, since childhood, an awareness that animal life was the only way left for him to exist meaningfully. He himself wears a dog collar around the neck-it once belonged to the ninth dog. When Heyboer huried the dog in the garden, he assumed the collar and the canine role. "I wear this band from my dog. I can understand my dogs better than my neighbors. They have more creativity-are totally alive-that is creation. Animals are alive in their selfcontained totality. There should he ro distance between an artist and the essence of life. Therefore an artist can live on an animal level-the purest forced labor camp in 1943. Here he witnessed hate "too emotional to feel or comprehend." After seven months, he had reached the border of life and death and was left to die, rolled up in newspapers like a mummy. Somehow, he managed to make his way back to Holland but the labor camp had confirmed his evaluation of a hostile world and left deep scars on his

In his mind, his childhood home and society were the same as the wartime imprisonment Three years ago he wrote, "The labor camp was not worse than either. All too uncreative." He stayed with his parents until the war ended and then took to wandering aimlessly all over Holland.

Mental Hospital

In 1951, Heyboer sabed admis. sion to the mental hospital at Santpoort, near Haarlem; after witnessing the lonely death of one of his kittens.

"When I went there, I could not yet live because I was surrounded by normal forms. I wanted to be where things were not normal. My feelings were too deep for relations with normal people." Here, too, an animal played an important role in his life. While I was walking around the grounds one day, I looked into the eyes of a deer and saw. for the first time again, life. Until then I had no contact with life. Normal people are too stupid, like cows going to the same place every day to be milked. The abnormal people were broken, too far from life to have contact with them."

after six months, he realized his future lay in the complete acceptance of an abnormal life, "Santpoort was my blunting-ofthe-mind period, a time to wash out what had happened before." In recent times, Heyboer has had three heart attacks. "The doctor realizas I must always be in danger of death—my spirit needs it. Therefore, I receive

In Dublin, Peter O'Toole has been starring in a Beckett play. In London, elaborate prepara-tions are being made for Beck-ett's latest, "Breath," which takes only thirty seconds to perform. "Breath" premiered perform. at Oxford at a performance to raise funds for a theater there that will bear the dramatist's name. At the Théâtre Récamier en Monday evening, the Renaud-Barrault company, which is reviving a cycle of Beckett plays, mounted a new production w his most famous contribution to the stage "Waiting for Godot." Although the play has rarely been absent from the Paris boards since the premiere .- 1most two decades ago, the restaging was deliriously greeted by the younger first-nighters. Beckett has become an idol during the last few years, replacing the T.S. Eliot of the 1920s as the poet-prophet of modern despair. "Godot" had its world premiere at the Theatre Babylone in 1252. It is unlikely that it would have had a premiere anywhere had it not been for the perceptivity of that daring director, Roger Blin, who saw in the published but neglected script a fine opportunity for an avant-garde thrust. His production brought international renown to Beckett and the play. Blin has now revived lt with bis customary brilliance. Both the rhythm and delivery of the meandering and monotonous text have a sharp and invigo-

Ferhaps not, but there is enough space between the lines to suggest answer blanks on an examination paper. Scholars with nothing better to do have been filling in the inviting blanks since 1952. As a most everyone must know by now, "Godot" depicts humanity as two clownish old tremps awaiting in a desolate field the promised arrival of a mysterious absentee, Godot. Their jabberings and dismal joking is interrupted by the passing of a brutal fat man who drives before him a palsied slave, a beast of burden. The three converse and the idiotic slave recites, but all to no discernible purpose. In the second act, the fat man, stricken blind, pays a return visit and then continues on his pointless journey, leaving the two bewildered beggars to keep their overdue appointment.

The general scheme of the piece recalls Lord Dunsany's "Glittering Gate," long in the Abbey Theatre repertory, m which two elderly Dublin loafers, dead and before the portal of Paradisa impatiently jimmy the celestial door. They find heaven empty and derisiva "Isn't that just like them?" inquires one of the pair. "Oh, yes, that's very like them," replies his companion.

"Eva Peron" (at the Epec de Bois) is so far out that beside it, even Beckett's dramaturgy seems to have the punctilio of Pinero. The initial theater work of the young cartonist Copt. the play is surrealistic fantasy about the late wife of Argentina's former dictator...

Points to the East but spans the world with branches in over 30 territories

The one hundred and sixteenth Annual General Meeting will be held on 8th April at 38 Bishopsgate, London, E.C.2. The following are extracts from the Statement by the Chairman, Mr. W. G. Pullen, which has been circulated with the report and accounts for the year 1969.

Since my statement a year ago we have taken a momentous step in merging with our good friends, The Standard Bank Limited, and The Chartered Bank is now a wholly owned subsidiary of Standard and Chartered Banking Group Limited. Such a change of status after 116 years of indopendence, during which the bank passed through many vicissitudes, including two world wars, and emerged strong and successful, caused inevitably a measure of nostalgic regret in a loyal staff past and present, and we believe in many customers and stockholders too. However this is the day of larger and larger banks giving the widest range of services to, amongst others, the huge international operating companies, and with our merger we become part of an organisation with more than double our capital, reserves and balance sheet figures, and with a correspondingly increased geographical coverage. Above all, The Standard Bank Limited make ideal partners for we are both British overseas banks steeped in the same tradition, handling the same type of business and yet we complement each other and do not overlap in our world branch system. Finally, and this we, and I am sure our connections at home and overseas, cherish most of all, The Chartered Bank will continue to operate as it has through the years giving the same service with the same staff to our customers and our host countries.

In Europe by the establishment of a bank in Zurich in collaboration with Christiania Bank og Kreditkasse, Oslo, and Bankhaus Conrad Hinrich Donner of Hamburg under the oame of Anglo Nordic Bank Limited, and in Rotterdam a bank in the came of European and Overseas Trading Bank N.V., also with Bankhaus Conrad Hinrich Donner as a partner, we are pursuing our policy of giving the fullest services to our branches overseas and to our International Banking Division in London.

This Year's Accounts

Owing to the nationalisation of Allahabad Bank Limited, India, the assets and liabilities of that bank are oot included in our consolidated balance sheet. The balance sheet totals of Allahabad Bank for 1968 were £73 millions and, in view of the elimination of figures of this size from our group accounts for 1969, I am pleased to be able to report that our consolidated balance sheet totals have increased by £27 millions to £935 millions. Current.

deposit and other accounts have decreased by £12 millions but if the comparative figures for 1968 were adjusted to allow for the deposits of Allahabad Bank there would be an increase of

The rights issue to stockholders in January 1969 increased the Bank's issued capital to £9,680,000. The premium amounting to £2,117,500 resulting from the issue has been credited to the Reserve Funds. After an adjustment to the Reserve Funds due to the exclusion of Allahabad Bank's figures, the Bank's capital and consolidated published reserves together with the balance on profit and loss account now total £29,163,910, an increase of £4,118,899.

Profits and Dividends

After making the usual provisions and deducting minority interests in subsidiaries, the consolidated net profit for the year is £2,960,210 an increase of £482,803 on the previous year At the halfway stage we reported that profits were slightly below the comparable figure for the first half of 1968 and the improvement now shown is due to an increased volume of business 10 the second half of the year which improved our profitability. especially in our overseas branches and subsidiaries.

With the balance of profit brought forward from last year of £989,776 the amount available for distribution is £3,949,986 out of which £1,082,364 has been transferred to Reserve Funds and £370,000 to Reserves for Contingencies. The interim dividend of 74% paid on 26th September 1969 absorbed £726,000 and a second interim dividend of 72% payable on 27th February 1970 makes the total for the year 15%, the same as for the previous year. The balance to be carried forward to 1970 will then be £1,045,622.

McCracken Urges 5% Money Supply Hike

time has come for the Federal Reserve Board to increase the money supply by a 5 percent annual rate.

Sen. Gordon Allott (R., Col.), chairman of the Senate's Republiom Policy Committee, told a news conference today that the Momacken recommendation was made at this morning's White House geeting attended by Mr. Nixon's top economic aides and congrescontinued:

But said Sen. Allott, no one at the White House meeting not even Mr. Nixon—indicated whether they had any inkling as to whether the independent Fed has indeed acted to ease its policies. Earlier, Mr. McCracken had pointed to signs that the economy was on the right course.

He cited the 10.6 percent increase in the 1970 fixed capital expen-diure forecast last week, the fact that the basic inventory situation was generally well adjusted and the expansionary shift in fiscal policy.

"These facts do not add up to what economists would call a recession," he told reporters at a

White House briefing.
The shift in fiscal policy is well timed and responsive to the needs of having the economy move into sustained expansion, he said.

"r. McCracken pointed out there was a six to 12-month time lag in the biting process of fiscal adjust-ments, and present fiscal policies, he said, were geared to future

He stressed that prices were one of the slowest economic features to respond to monetary or fiscal policy moves. However, he said he still hoped to see only a 3 to 3.5 percent increase on an annual basis in prices by the end of the year. In reply to a question, Mr. Mc-Cracken said the 4.2 percent unemployment figure last month would not urge him to change his estimate of a 4.3 percent average unemployment level for 1970. But be stressed that this was more of a zone than a precise fig-ure, a middle point estimate, he

More U.S.-EEC Contact

PARIS, March 17 (NYT) .-West German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel is quietly trying to recruit backing within the European Economic Community for an idea that might help defuse the trade conflicts with the United States.

As Washington and Brussels publicly exchange accusations over responsibility for the deterioration in their relations, Mr. Scheel is promoting the creation of a permanent com-mittee with representatives of hoth sides to sit with the declared purpose of avoiding misunderstandings.

BRIDGE-

By Alan Truscott

Fortune smiled on Australian expert Roelof Smilde in the diagramed deal, taken from the match between an unofficial United States team and an Australian team, played in Sydney last month.

Smilde's one-club opening bid was conventional in the New South Wales system used by the Australian team. The system denied possession of any five-card suit, other than clubs, and was forcing.
West's two-club bid was natural and East raised to three clubs. South's double was for a take-out. North took a rosy view of his hand by bidding four clubs, an instruction to South to pick one of the major suits. When West led the spade three, an obvious singleton, South's prospects were gloomy. His only chance was that West held both minor-suit aces and three hearts, not including the king. This would be a 40 percent chance, slightly improved by the overcell as far as the aces were concerned. Playing for this long shot, South led a diamond at the second trick and won with the king in dummy. When West ducked, he finessed the heart jack successfully, cashed the heart ace, dropping the king and led to the heart queen in dummy. He then lost one club trick and two diamond tricks, making the vulnerable game. When the hand was replayed on Vu-graph, Robinson played in the sounder contract of three hearts responding one heart to an opening bld of one diamond.

The opening lead was a club to the king and ace and West shifted to his singleton spade. The declarer should perhaps have tried the same bold play from the North position after of leading a diamond, but he laid down the heart ace and played a second heart. His idea was to remove the trumps quickly from the opposing hands and avert a ruff.

But it did not work out well. East won the second trump lead with the heart king and gave his partner a spade ruff. The declarer had to lose two diamond tricks eventually and was down one. Australia gained 12 international match points.

CONFIRM OR DENY: INFORMING THE PEOPLE ON NATIONAL SECURITY

By Phil G. Goulding. Harper & Row. 369 pp. 3795. Reviewed by John Chancellor

THIS is a disturbing book. An American photographic reconnaissance plane flies over the French atomic plant at Pierrelatic, and the French are furious. The American Air Force tells the office of the Secretary of Defense in the Pentagon that the plane was forced off course by a thunderstorm, and the news is duly announced in Washington. In fact, the skies were clear, and the incident occurred because of a communications mix-up. But the Secretary of Defense was given wrong information.

• The American communications recompaissance ship Liberty is cruising off the coast of Sinal during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. The Pentagon sends orders for it to move farther off shore. But the orders are sent by mistake first to the Pacific, back to Fort Meade, Md., and finally to a shore sta-tion in Morocco. But the Liberty was listening for signals from Ethiopia which never came. Israeli planes and ships attacked the Liberty, and many men were killed or injured.

● The Pentagon orders the Commander-in-Chief, U.S. Pacific Command, to investigate Soviet charges that American planes strafed a Russian ship in a North Vietnamese harbor. Cincpac replies that no American planes were over the harbor, which is announced by the Pentagon. Two weeks later, the Secretary of Defense discovers that American planes had been firing at antiaircraft guns in the harbor, and could, indeed, have hit the Russian ship.

Phil Goulding was Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs when these things happened, and his book is a remarkably candid and unsettling chronicle of one foul-up after another. Nobody's perfect, but there are times, reading Goulding's memoir, when you wonder if the Pentagon isn't lowering the national average.

What is truly disturning about some of these incidents is the degree to which the office of the Secretary of Defense is either uninformed or misinformed. While it is surely difficult to maintain instant communication with about five million people in the defense establishment, uniformed and civilian, in just about every place on earth, Goulding de-stroys the image we have, or the hope, perhaps, that somewhere, somebody must know what's happening. For people who worry about Presidents with fingers on the nuclear button, this kind of reading leads to bad dreams. Goulding says, "In our office, the Secretary's office or the White House we never knew how much we did not as the senior public relations officer of the Department of Defense, and of those years, he says, "I misled and misinformed the American people a good many times in a good man ways-through my own lack o foresight, through carelessness through relaying incomplete in formation which the origina tors considered complete through transmitting report which had been falsified deliberately at lower levels." That last phrase is very plain tall in the growing community of former Defense officials who are jotting down their recollections of public service.

Moreover, Goulding says that in almost every instance he operated from the very same reports which were going to his bosses. Secretaries McNamars and Clifford.

Goulding believes Lyndor Johnson fired McNamara be cause the Secretary of Defense had lost faith in the bombin of North Vietnam, Further Goulding is convinced that McNamara was opposed to the military request for 206,000 more troops for Victnam in 1968, and would have resigned if the President had pushed through any significant in crease in troop levels.
As it was, McNamars was or his way out, being replaced by Clark Clifford. Goulding first regarded Clifford as a hardline crony of the President who would be inflexible on the war As it turned out, it took only two months for Clifford to decide that the effort in Vietnam was no longer essential to the national security of the United States.

Goulding, belonged to that small, influential group of Pen-tagon civilians who were against further escalation of the war as early as 1967 (Cyrus Vance, Paul Nize, Paul Warnke and the late John McNaughton. His testimony confirms the brilliant reconstruction of that period written by the former Under Secretary of the Air Force, Townsend Hoopes, called The Limits of Intervention."
Curlously, Goulding makes no mention of a long paper he wrote on the perils of escalation. According to Hoopes, the Goulding paper was a decisive What does come through in Goulding's book is the picture !... ganized, divided Pentagon being held together by civilian in the Office of the Secretary inof Defense. The book is flaw and ed by too much insider's stuff, in too many organizational out lines, plugs for parts of the bureaucracy—but it is neverthe less vivid contemporary history. of great value to people who wonder what's really going on .. in the Pentagon. We can, perhaps, take some perverse com- fort in the fact that even the ... Assistant Secretary for Public -Affairs didn't always know :

Reed, who led the Knieks to the Eastern Division title, their first division crown since 1954, received 61 first-place votes and 498 points in balloting by the NBA players.

The six-year veteran from Grambling edged Jerry West of the Los Angeles Lakers, who got 51 first-place votes and 457 points. Rookie Lew Alcindor of Milwaukee finished third with 335 points. Walt Frazier of New York was fourth with 50 points, followed by Billy Cunningham of Philadelphia and Connie Hawkins of Phoenix, tied with 27 each.

Reed, the first Knick to be named MVP, was also the MVP in the All-Star Game and has an average of more than 22 points a game, his career best. The 6-foot-10 Knick captain also is one of the best rebounders in the league. He was second to Wes Un-seld of Baltimore in the MVP voting last season.

The Cadets, after taking a 20-point lead at haiftime, were con-fronted by a Manhattan press after intermission and saw their lead shrink to a point before they stabilized themselves and won, Then St. John's, blasting off to an 8-0 lead in the first three min-

Thus the stage is set for a rematch between Army, known as a rigidly disciplined team that stresses defense and the most deliberale type of offense, and St. John's, also disciplined but supposedly more adaptable. When the teams mer at St. John's in midseason, St. John's won, 54-44. In both games, good defense by the winners saved them from the consequences of their offensive difficulties. St. John's did a fine job in containing Rich Yunkus in the first half and for an important stretch in the second. Although Yunkus wound up with 27 points, not far from his 30-point average, the Redmen kept the ball away from him for long periods, thanks to Bill Paultz and a sagging defense. Army held Manhattan to six baskets in 14 tries during the first half, while it shot over Manhattan's zone defense for a 38-18 lead. Moynihan's 3 Mistakes

WASHINGTON. - Someone is trying to ruin Daniel Patrick Moynihan. Such little murders are the chaff of Washington existence, but in this one there are some interesting lessons worth dwelling upon. First. dusty facts: Moynihan an adviser to the President on domestic affairs. In his capacity as presidential adviser, he has given the President advice on racial policy. He has put this advice in writing. He has written his advice in language which, though it cannot be said to lilt lightly off the page, still does not lead instantly as most White House prose does to the gurgling Furthermore, Moynisnores. han's advice to the President appears to have been his own.

Baker

Students of power tactics in the organization will imotediately note that Moynihan has made three dreadful mistakes. any one of which gives his eueoiy leverage with which to destroy him.

His first error was to put his advice into writing. A man in an advisory position never. never puts real advice into written form unless he suffers from a yearning to be unemplored.

The sensible way to advise about a personai anyone menace, of course, is to invite him to meet you on a park bench and tell him privately what is happening, and this is how Moynihan should have given the President his advice on racial policy. Because ne chose to put it in writing, someone who hopes to see the back of him found an embarrassing document to put in the hands of the press. Moynilian's second mistake was to phrase his memo in readable English. Newspaper editors group when offered leaked federal documents because the typical federal document is written in a language which, if reproduced verbatim in a news-

By Russell Baker paper, makes subscribers cancel

> the paper. A leaked document written in English is such a rarity that editors, upon receiving one, are moved to buy drinks for everybody in the house and give the memo maximum display. Moreover newspaper readers encountering a rare passage of literate copy come awake with the groggy suspicion that something terrible must be going on down there in Washington.

If Moynihan had used bis time to study organization polities instead of racial problems in the United States, he might have used bis nights and weekends to learn how not to write and, thus, have produced memos so dull that even if they had becu leaked to tite press, no one would have awakened long enough to read them. His third mistake, of course, was ln giving the President advice that was his own. If one raust put advice in written form then common sense requires that one make his clearly expressed advice agree with whatever advice a large and influential group of voters would like to give the President. In this way, the adviser will have a constituency to support him after the inevitable disclosure of his memo. Moynihan—ah, vanity, can thy name be there is no constituency except Moynihan's next-of-kin. Someone may say, we know what Moynihan should not have done, but what should he have done? He should have done what every sensible adviser does in similar circumstances. He should have ground out long. flatulent, meaningless memo-randa suitable for leakage as well as for evidence that he offered advice of his own to the President. It is advice for which was carning his par.

His "advice" should have been a compound of the various seventh-rate ideas the public is accustomed to hearing. When he bad finished thinking and was ready to give the President advice to be taken seriously, he should have invited Nixon to stroll inconspicuously over into Lafayette Square and meet him on a park bench.

of his life. On the property included in the sale are the graves of Wagner and his wife, Cosima Negotlations have been quietly going on during the last several months. The govermment of the state of Bavaria has already offered the Wagner family close to 10 million German marks (about $2.5 million), and it is understood that the government is prepared to go as high as 15 million marks.

The Wagner family, which needs. money, is prepared to sell the archives to anybody in or outside of Germany who will offer a greater sum. There are. however, three conditions to the sale: the collection will have to remain in Bayreuth, it cannot be split up, and it must be opened to research.

It is the hope of the family that a center of Wagnerian studies will be established at the Villa Wahnfried.

Included in the collection are handwritten sketches from all the operas, and full scores in Wagner's hand of such masterpieces as "The Flying Dutchman."
"Lohengrin" and "Tristan and Isolde."

Wagner wrote hundreds of articles, and many of the original drafts are in the collection. The correspondence includes thousands of letters to people including European musical figures, especially Franz Liszt, and letters to and from King Ludwig II of Bavaria. Most of these letters have never been published.

The Villa Wahnfried remains much as Wagner left it. He built it on the Bayreuth property with funds supplied by his patron, Ludwig II. All of his furniture, his piano, even his butterfly, collection and Oriental objets d'art, are there in good condition. He and Cosima were buried in the Hofgarten, adjoining the

If the entire collection were broken up and sold at open auction, it would realize a staggering price. The Bavarian government was prepared to pay as much as $100,000 for the manuscript of any one Wagner opera.

Richard Wagner married Cosima von Billow in 1870. She was his second wife, and he was 57 years old. Cosima, born in 1837, was the daughter of Franz Liszt. She bore Wagner three children. The only son was Siegfried (1869-1930), who married an English girl, Winifred Williams, in 1915. Cosima lived to the age of 93 and died the same year as her son. Winifred Wagner, 72 is the head of the Wagner family. She had four chil-dren. Wieland, who died in 1966 at the age of 49, had run the Bayreuth Festival since its resumption in 1951. Mrs. Wagner an early member of the Nazl party, had heen forbidden by the Allied military government to engage in any activities pertaining to the festival. Her other children were Wolfgang—who is now the head of the Bayreuth Pestival—Verena, and Priedlind.

As head of the family, Winifred Wagner is the nominal owner of Bayreuth, Recent years have seen the family in financial difficulties. The annual Bayreuth Festival operates at a deficit.

If and when the Wagner archives are opened to scholars, it will inaugurate a new era in Wagner research. As it is, Richard Wagner has been discussed more than any other composer in history, and books on his life and work are still steadily being published. But all of the scholarly work has been done without recourse to the archives at Bayreuth.
